

Hans Ehrenberg Schule

Hans Ehrenberg School is a Lutheran private school in Bielefeld-Sennestadt located between Dortmund and Hanover.

It is named after the Lutheran minister Hans Philipp Ehrenberg who was born as the son of Jewish parents and later converted to the Lutheran denomination. His life reminds us of developing a tolerant and critical way of thinking and working together as a community.

We are a secondary school where you have the opportunity to get your A-levels within 8 years.

We, the students, are able to take part in regular school exchanges with our partner schools in France, Palestine and Poland.

Our school offers a wide range of special classes and extracurricular activities such as the “brass class“, dance groups, sports teams, musical, theatre, film, literature etc.

Events like school festivals, sports galas and the language festival make our school a place where students have the chance to show their talents and develop their self-confidence.
